
Thoughtstorm® Invitation

YOU are cordially invited to participate in scheduled Thoughtstorm Sessions. The Thoughtstorm process is an easily learned technique for creating and developing valuable ideas.

Together we share our experiences and viewpoints in a process designed to generate new ideas that we would not have had on their own. Come and participate in our next Thoughtstorm!

About Thoughtstorm®

Thoughtstorm is an exciting and productive group process developed by Star's Edge Research and Development, a "think tank." The Thoughtstorm process allows people to plan the future, solve problems, do strategic planning, etc.

Thoughtstorm aligns a group of people so they can cooperate toward developing ideas and solutions ... instead of arguing, competing, and being uncooperative.

The Thoughtstorm Group develops better ideas and solutions than any one person could develop alone.

For example, if you and I together took an IQ Test, you'd have answers I wouldn't, and I'd have answers you wouldn't ... and together we'd have a higher IQ!

Likewise, Thoughtstorm Groups, when aligned, create truly phenomenal answers!

Another phenomenon occurs, called "linking." Linking creates a new organism or consciousness that is senior to any group member and doesn't exist except when the group exists; a consciousness combined!

A Thoughtstorm Session produces a "corecept" (core concept) that is obvious to the group or anyone else. A corecept is actually a belief contained in mass consciousness and anyone participating in mass consciousness would recognize it.

So ... let's have some fun! Thank you for your participation and contribution!

WELCOME to the Thoughtstorm Project.

It is demonstrably true that one can align the output power of a single source with the output power of another source and end up with more total power than either source is capable of producing by itself. For example: multi-engined aircraft, banks of power generators, multiple stage rockets, teams of horses, or the strands of a rope.

The purpose of THOUGHTSTORM is to apply the same principle to human thinking.

Some terms you should get to know:

Corecept n. A word fashioned from the words "core"; meaning the center or innermost part of anything, the essence; and the word "concept"; meaning a general idea or thought. The "corecept" is the fundamental or basic principle arrived at in a Thoughtstorm session. It is "the eye of the Thoughtstorm."

Thoughtstorm Log Book (log) n. A running record of the ideas and corecepts generated by the group. It also contains topics to launch new Thoughtstorm sessions.

Pilot n. The person who charts the course of the Thoughtstorm and maintains the Thoughtstorm Log.

Alignment Questions. Specific topics that generate the mental alignment necessary to the Thoughtstorm process.

Thoughtstorm Procedure:

1. A topic statement, followed by a question, is presented to the group by the pilot. The Thoughtstorm begins!
2. Responses are shared, amplified or discarded. Patterns start to emerge and the group begins to rough out underlying principles and truths.
3. These principles and truths are further refined until one or more corecepts appear. Corecepts are not easily mistaken. Corecepts find group agreement.
4. Corecepts and related ideas are valuable. They are always logged. At the option of the group, the corecepts may be discussed as to practical application.

The Advices:

1. Anyone may say or ask anything at anytime.
2. The source of an idea is irrelevant.
3. To whatever degree comfortable, one should assume the viewpoint of identity-less, boundary-less consciousness.
4. Learn to associate, speculate, tolerate and extrapolate.
5. Push through until the corecepts are apparent to all.

Thoughtstorm Phenomena:

We do not attempt to list these in any order or to make any predictions regarding their occurrences or to offer explanations. We merely point out what has been apparent to many participants.

(1) By the third or fourth session (2 hour sessions, one week apart), all participants reported a rise in personal income.

(2) Several participants have noted that in the heat of Thoughtstorming they have expressed the thoughts of others or had others express their thoughts.

(3) Nearly all participants have experienced a greater mental acuity during and after the sessions.

(4) All participants have perceived a pleasant sensation associated with the discovery of a corecept.

(5) Supernatural phenomena, of a religious or spiritual nature, have been noted (i.e. the sense of a universal or cosmic consciousness).

(6) Group ESP and psychokinesis are unconfirmed, but have been noted.

(7) Mental blind spots, or an inability to think about something (black holes in consciousness?), have been encountered.

(8) Mental images of unknown origin have been simultaneously perceived by several participants.

When you are ready, you may begin Thoughtstorming with the following Alignment Question:

Common concerns generate common purposes and mental alignment. How could Thoughtstorm benefit this group?

Note: In the absence of the understanding brought about by an alignment question, Thoughtstorm may be ineffective and combative.
